In the face of the double-edged sword of tourism, how to find a balance between tourism development and cultural protection and inheritance, and not be harmed by this sword, is an important topic of academic research. At present, minority rural tourism has gradually become the entry point of rural revitalization in minority areas. With the development of economy, ethnic villages in different stages of tourism development have different status quo in the inheritance and protection of ethnic culture. Taking the opportunity of rural revitalization, Qiandongnan Prefecture, Guizhou Province pays attention to protecting and inheriting local intangible cultural heritage in the process of developing rural tourism, integrates local intangible cultural heritage, local conditions and customs into cultural tourism, and drives the development of tourism through cultural elements. 1. Introduction

In recent years, rural tourism has developed rapidly. According to the Ministry of Culture and Tourism, in 2019, the total number of rural tourists in China was 3.09 billion, an increase of 9.7 percent year-on-year, accounting for more than half of the total number of domestic tourists. The total revenue of rural tourism was 1.81 trillion yuan, up 11.3% year on year; The number of rural tourism workers accounted for 34.3 percent of the total employment in the monitoring sites [1].

The development of tourism is bound to have an impact on local culture, and good tourism development is conducive to the protection and inheritance of local culture. Local residents can not only get the cognition of their own national culture, but also form the consciousness and behavior of protecting their own national culture.

Ethnic villages are the settlements formed by local ethnic minorities who use nature for long-term production and life in the process of historical development. Their ethnic culture, with its mysterious, primitive and strange characteristics, greatly satisfies tourists' spiritual enjoyment and psychological needs of "seeking novelty, novelty, happiness and knowledge" [3]. Rural good ecological resources and unique production and life style, become an important attraction of rural tourism.

2. Difficulties Faced by Village Tourism

2.1. Original Ecological Environment Needs to be Improved

Ecological is the core of attract tourists, with the tourism fast development, the ecological environment is destroyed, national characteristics of construction by the subtle influence of modern architecture style, gradually lose the original style, such as the original home stay facility into a small building, architectural design is too uniform, regardless of the appearance of the building or are all the same color, road is smooth and straight, Lack of rural flavor and spirituality, destroyed the original nature of the countryside. Although ancient buildings such as the village drum tower are old, they have strong ethnic culture flavor. If these characteristics disappear, the vitality of ethnic village tourism will be exhausted.

2.2. Single Tourism Project

Most villages have no deep excavating regional culture characteristics, to simple replication of tourism projects, single style similar, the same, such as organic, picking, fishing farms and chess activities, to build a content rich product system, there is no real form of sightseeing, the inspection, experience, vacation, raise the three-dimensional tourism products such as health care system.

3. A Case of Zhaoxing Dong Village

3.1. Previous Research

In recent years, many scholars have studied minority village tourism in our country, and as mentioned by Yang Chunrong scholars in "Research on the coordination between ethnic Village Tourism Development and rural revitalization", some problems have been highlighted in the development process of ethnic village tourism in our country in recent years. Although people are aware of the importance of preserving diverse cultures, the original inhabitants are exposed to the modern life, especially the young people begin to pursue the modern life, and they gradually lose their traditions. The mysterious primitive culture is packaged and developed, the commercialization of tourism makes the traditional national culture commercialized, and the authenticity of tourist experience is damaged [4].

Kwan scholars in the strategy of rejuvenating the country under the background of guizhou minority nationality areas non-material cultural heritage protection and utilization movement, analyzes the strategy of rejuvenating rural to guizhou minority nationality areas the opportunities brought about by the non-material cultural heritage protection and utilization, put forward six ways of protection and utilization, in guizhou minority areas non-material cultural heritage protection and utilization to provide reference and reference [5].

3.2. Location

Zhaoxing Dong Village is located in the southeast of Liping County, Qiandongnan Prefecture, Guizhou Province. Surrounded by mountains, the houses in the village are stilted and stilted, row upon row. It is the largest village of Dong nationality in China. At present, more than 6,000 Dong compatriots live here, which is called the "Dong Village of a thousand households". Zhaoxing Dong Village is located in a long and narrow valley with steep and winding roads. It is very difficult to develop large-scale agriculture on the karst landform. This geographical environment directly led to its poverty and relative backwardness in the past.

3.3. Advantages of Zhaoxing Dong Village

3.3.1. National Policy Support

The rapid development of rural tourism has benefited from a series of good policies. In the Strategic Plan for Rural Revitalization (2018-2022), it is proposed that "villages with rich natural history and cultural resources, such as famous historical and cultural villages, traditional villages, villages with ethnic minority characteristics, and famous villages with characteristic landscape tourism, are important carriers to highlight and inherit excellent traditional Chinese culture [6]. We will comprehensively protect heritage sites, historic buildings, traditional residential buildings and other traditional buildings. We should respect the living patterns and traditional habits of the original residents, speed up the improvement of village infrastructure and public environment, make rational use of village characteristic resources, develop rural tourism and characteristic industries, and form a benign mutually promoting mechanism between the protection of characteristic resources and village development." "We will vigorously promote the implementation of the revitalization plan of traditional crafts in rural areas, and cultivate and form traditional crafts products with ethnic and regional characteristics. "We will actively develop traditional festival cultural supplies and folk art and folk performance projects such as martial arts, opera, dragon dance, lion dance, and gongs and drums, so as to effectively align cultural resources with modern consumer demand."
3.3.2. Natural Advantages

Built in the fifth year of Zhenglong in the Southern Song Dynasty (1160 AD), Zhaoxing Dong Village has a history of more than 850 years. Guizhou has three ethnic autonomous prefectures, 11 ethnic autonomous counties and 253 ethnic townships, where 17 ethnic groups, including Miao, Buyi and Dong, have lived for generations. Rich in cultural heritage, it ranks first in the list of national intangible cultural heritage projects, and the number of Chinese traditional villages selected to the list of cities and prefectures in China ranks first. There is one representative list of intangible cultural heritage of humanity and 56 representative items of national intangible cultural heritage. There are three national-level demonstration bases for productive protection of intangible cultural heritage.

Due to the geographical environment, the lag of industrialization and other reasons, the traditional culture is relatively less damaged, and the overall protection is good. In Dong villages, middle-aged and elderly villagers still wear traditional Dong costumes, although young people and children are rarely dressed in ethnic costumes due to foreign influences. Dong Village has an interesting ethnic culture. All of them are surnamed Lu and divided into five house groups, which are called "tuan" by local people, namely Rentuan, Yituan, Li Tuan, ZhiTuan and Xin Tuan. In the past, the boundaries of the five regiments were clearly marked, but now the boundaries are blurred and become ZhaoxingDazhai.

3.3.3. Folk Architecture - Drum Tower Group

"Before building a village, build a drum tower." The Drum Tower group in Zhaoxing Dong Village is unique among Dong villages in China, and is known as the "hometown of Drum Tower". The construction of the drum tower depends on the voluntary donation of villagers, and the structure of the building itself is also very exquisite. The whole drum tower is built of fire wood, without a nail and riveting, and the drum tower is like a pagoda. Drum Tower is a symbol of unity and auspiciousness of Dong village, as well as a symbol of prosperity and unity of Dong village (see Table 1). The Drum Tower is a place with public space, sacred space and law space. All the laws and rules of the Dong people are formulated in the middle of the Drum tower. "Each drum tower represents a family with the same root, and they usually go to the Drum Tower to play chess, sing and have fun, and they will go to the Drum Tower to discuss important events [7]." On weekdays, the Drum Tower is a place for villagers to rest and chat, and on festivals, the Drum Tower is also a place for everyone to get together, where they play lushun and step on the song hall to their heart's content. Whether ushering or sending, marriage or death, all of them should be completed in the space of the round sky and place.

The Dong people believe that song is knowledge and culture. Whoever has more songs is a knowledgeable person. They love songs, learn songs and sing songs for generations. They take songs as their music and are proud of "being able to sing and having many songs". They express their feelings with songs. Dong children start to learn songs when they are two or three years old. There is a very important factor in learning songs, that is, the singer requires all singers to pay attention to the harmony between each other in the process of "singing by one person, and sharing by all", so as to create a wonderful harmony together. Dong song melodious, beautiful melody, especially multi-part mixed chorus, exciting. During festivals or when guests come to the door, the Dong people gather together happily, stepping on the song hall and promoting officials. Therefore, the integrated development of cultural transmission and ethnic village tourism cannot be separated from the participation of villagers. Performing arts competitions can effectively motivate villagers, especially young people, to participate in the team of cultural protection and inheritance. In Dong villages, some competitions can be held in winter and summer holidays, such as Dong song competition, Lusheng dance competition, copper drum competition and traditional handicraft competition. Non-genetic inherents in scenic spots can be invited as judges, and awards can be set up to encourage villagers to register and participate actively. Visitors to the scenic spot

In the past, Dong people ate glutinous rice, and when conditions were good, they would add roast meat, which was dry and delicious. Therefore, the characteristic snacks of "roast glutinous rice" were derived from the Dong stockade. If you like spicy food, you will put roasted chili on it. If you like hot and sour food, you will add homemade pickled cabbage. Finally, you will knead glutinous rice by hand, so that the ingredients can be better integrated into the glutinous rice. Find a sense of belonging in cultural rituals, and consciously pass on cultural habits to the next generation. Locals have gained national confidence from being stared at by tourists. "The Dong songs can only be passed on if we sing them regularly. If we don't participate in competitions, we will not practice.
